D.P. Benjamin's epic fantasy "Stone Bride" will soon be available as an audio book. Elevation Press is currently reviewing auditions from voice actors including several from the United Kingdom. Given the semi-medieval setting of "Stone Bride," accents from Great Britain, Ireland, Scotland, Wales, Australia, and New Zealand are deemed appropriate. The availability of the audio book on the Audible.com website will be announced in a future newsletter. You can follow our progress on the audio book at our website: elevation-press-books.com. In the meantime, the e-book and paperback versions of "Stone Bride" are available at the Elevation Press online bookstore:

Writing under the pen-name PK Stuart, Western Slope author and fellow member of Rocky Mountain Fiction Writers, Pam Chiaro, has published book one of her Time's End series. The book is available at this link: TREE LINE. Of her work, "Inside the Tree Line," the author says:

"If you have to be the focus of a prophecy, the damn thing should give you a hint about how to pull it off. Ky Owen is tasked with changing the world he was born into by traveling to the distant past. Armed with extraordinary magical skills and an unwavering determination to succeed, Ky sets out on a journey he doesn't quite understand, hoping to find the answers he needs. Angela Higgins is an investigative reporter with her dream job, but her life feels flat and unfulfilled. Drawn to the mountains of Colorado to investigate the disappearance of an ex-lover, she's dreading what she will find. Meeting Ky, an intriguing traveler claiming to be from the future, isn't what she expected, and his story isn't one she trusts. Two people who were never supposed to meet. A prophecy that is murkier than most. They must decide whether to risk everything to save the future."

Elevation Press Works with New Authors

This month, our independent press is working with new authors in America and internationally to produce a non-fiction book about democracy and a variety of fiction titles, including children's books. We're excited to tackle these new projects and we'd love to hear from anyone who wishes to see their work in print.
